Arbitration Remains Popular Alternative for Resolving International Disputes

Most Recent ICDR® Caseload Data Shows Parties from 99 Countries, and a Wide Array of Industries, are Represented in Cases Filed in 2018

NEW YORK, N.Y.—June 24, 2019—The American Arbitration Association-International Centre for Dispute Resolution® (AAA-ICDR®) announced that the ICDR provided alternative dispute resolution services for 993 international cases, totaling US$8.2 billion in claims, filed in 2018. The ICDR's year-over-year caseload has remained relatively stable, with approximately 1,000 cases filed annually.

The international cases filed in 2018 involved parties from 99 countries, and a variety of industries. Approximately 30 percent of the international cases filed with the ICDR in 2018 (294 in total) were multi-party in nature. The largest categories of international cases filed in 2018 related to disputes among commercial franchises (272 cases), construction companies (113), technology (58 cases), insurance (43), energy (40), and pharmaceutical/biotechnology (23) industries.

“As the international demand for alternative dispute resolution services increases, we continue to offer access to a variety of experienced and respected independent arbitrators and mediators for parties in more than 90 countries,” said Eric Tuchmann, Senior Vice President, General Counsel and Corporate Secretary, AAA-ICDR. “The ICDR's extensive international presence can help large multinational corporations resolve disputes quickly and cost-effectively.”

There were 92 applications for emergency measures of protection filed with the AAA-ICDR as of December 31, 2018, with 43 applications for emergency measures of protection resulting in full or partial emergency relief.

Furthermore, as part of the AAA-ICDR's ongoing commitment to diversity, more than one-fifth (22 percent) of qualified international arbitrators on the ICDR's roster are women. In fact, women arbitrators were appointed to help resolve about 22 percent of the cases facilitated by the ICDR in 2018.
